Producer Spotlight

Choosing family over athletic scholarships, John Balletto started the family business at just 17 years old after his father's unexpected passing in 1977. Hazel, his mother, and John were determined to make their five-acre farm in Sonoma a successful business. Throughout the 1980s and 1990s they gradually increased in size, acquiring land throughout the Russian River Valley, including where the Balletto Vineyards winery is today. By the mid-1990s, Balletto had grown to one of the largest vegetable producers in Northern California. Water shortages in the region and an oversupply in vegetables put pressures on the business model. Friend and neighbor, Warren Dutton, suggested the family try another direction. They tried a small parcel at first, eventually transitioning to only growing grapes. In their first year they made just over 1,000 cases. Today, that number is around 20,000, with the other 90% of their grapes sold to friends and local producers. Farmers at heart, their wines are crafted for quality not quantity. 1776 is proud to carry the 2019 Balletto Pinot Noir.
